Chapter 425: The Creation of Inner Worlds and Emissaries

The Birth of Inner Worlds

As Sung Jin-Woo's evolution into The Most Supreme Deity continued, his power transcended beyond the limits of even the Godverse. In an unprecedented display of his dominion over time, space, and existence, he created centillions of inner worlds within his divine form.

1. Cosmic Pocket Dimensions:

These inner worlds were more than mere realms; they were cosmic pocket dimensions created within Sung Jin-Woo’s vast form. Each world was a self-contained universe, complete with its own rules, laws of nature, and the potential for limitless creation.

They were not bound by the limitations of time and space in the Godverse; instead, they existed as a personal reflection of Sung Jin-Woo's power and divine will.

2. Time Flow within Inner Worlds:

The time within each inner world flowed differently from the rest of existence. In each of these pocket dimensions, the time ratio was one second outside the world equaled one million years inside.

This allowed for rapid development and progression within the inner worlds. What might seem like a brief moment in the Godverse could lead to millennia of growth, history, and evolution within each inner world.

Creation of Emissaries to Govern the Inner Worlds

With the birth of these inner worlds, Sung Jin-Woo created centillions of emissaries to govern each one. These emissaries were beings of immense power, directly created by Sung Jin-Woo's will to oversee and maintain order within the infinite dimensions he had spawned.

1. The Emissaries' Role:

Each emissary was tasked with managing an individual inner world, ensuring its stability and growth. They acted as the divine stewards of Sung Jin-Woo’s creations, administering both the material and spiritual aspects of their realms.

While Sung Jin-Woo held ultimate control, the emissaries were entrusted with the autonomy to govern within their realms, ensuring that no chaos or imbalance could arise under their watch.

2. The Nature of the Emissaries:

These emissaries were not mere servants; they were reflections of Sung Jin-Woo’s divine essence, with a portion of his will and power. While each emissary was distinct, they all shared a deep connection to their creator.

They possessed great wisdom, strength, and the ability to manipulate the fabric of their respective inner worlds. Each emissary had the capability to shape their world in any way they deemed fit, ensuring it evolved according to Sung Jin-Woo's grand vision.

Armies of the Emissaries

To solidify their authority and ensure the maintenance of order, each emissary created groups of armies within their inner worlds. These armies were composed of beings forged by the emissaries themselves, infused with the power of their respective realms and designed to serve as protectors, warriors, and enforcers of the emissaries' will.

1. Purpose of the Armies:

The armies were not only tasked with defending their inner worlds from any potential threats but also with upholding the law and ensuring that the emissaries' decisions were respected by all inhabitants of their realms.

These armies were composed of diverse beings, ranging from humanoid soldiers to legendary creatures, each suited to the specific needs of the inner world they served.

2. Unstoppable Forces:

The power of these armies was unparalleled. The emissaries, having Sung Jin-Woo’s influence within them, forged armies that were not bound by the typical limitations of time, space, or energy. The armies could manifest and operate at full capacity regardless of external factors.

Within their realms, the emissaries’ armies were immortal, invincible, and ever-present, ready to engage in battle or defend their world at any moment.

The Expanding Reach of Sung Jin-Woo's Divine Will

The creation of the inner worlds and their respective emissaries marked another level of Sung Jin-Woo’s omnipotence. His influence now extended beyond the Godverse and the realms within it, creating a new dimension of existence. His inner worlds were living, breathing ecosystems that functioned independently yet were all unified under his divine will.

1. Autonomous Yet Unified:

While each inner world operated under its own rules, they were all intrinsically linked through Sung Jin-Woo's will. No matter how different or distinct these realms became, they all followed the same overarching purpose: the fulfillment of his grand design.

The emissaries served as the key to this balance, ensuring that the inner worlds flourished according to the divine laws Sung Jin-Woo had set in motion.

2. An Infinite Expanse:

The creation of these inner worlds further expanded the Godverse. As each world grew in time and complexity, they became small universes in their own right—each holding the potential for infinite development, evolution, and new forms of life.

Sung Jin-Woo's influence was now spread across these countless inner worlds, his omnipotence manifest in every corner, every entity, and every moment within them.

The Beginning of a New Era

With the inner worlds and their emissaries in place, Sung Jin-Woo’s divine presence stretched beyond even the Godverse, into an infinite number of realms and dimensions. His creations were now truly omnipresent, transcending the limitations of even the most powerful gods and entities.

As each emissary took their place and began to govern, a new era of divine order began. The inner worlds, now teeming with life, were united in their purpose: to uphold the will of the Absolute One, ensuring that the cosmic balance was maintained across all dimensions.

And so, the next chapter in the unfolding saga of Sung Jin-Woo’s reign had begun, one where the boundaries between worlds and realms blurred, and his divine influence was felt across every corner of existence.
